Stacked Deck teaches young people to approach life as smart risk-takers, weighing the pros and cons of their actions to determine the odds of achieving positive results. In six interactive lessons, the program teaches the history of gambling; the true odds and the “house edge”; gambling fallacies; signs, risk factors, and causes of problem gambling; and skills for good decision-making and problem-solving. Each lesson includes a PowerPoint slide show and a family page. The intervention is provided to students in 9-12th grades as part of a regularly scheduled class like health education or career management. Trained facilitators (teachers, prevention specialists, health educators) use a facilitator’s guide to lead five 50- to 90-minute interactive lessons over a period of 2-3 weeks.
