Simon Says: Take 10 Steps Forward

Posted on February 11, 2015 by awiredfamily in Uncategorized // 1 Comment

Remember the playground game Simon Says? Back in the day, I use to think of myself as the LeBron James of that game — capable of isolating the world around me — laser focused on instructions; ready to defeat my weaker, less skilled opponent. That was before the time school playgrounds were filled with hundreds of students with heads tilted forward, squinting to see the latest SnapChat image or Internet Meme.

Like most popular games, Simon Says went digital in the mid 1980's – several years following the introduction of the greatest accomplishment of mankind at the time, i.e., Pong. During that nascent era, we purchased a Simon Says electronic game for our two daughters. As our oldest child attempted to open the cardboard box that held the device — attached with hard plastic ties that could have foiled Houdini — I anxiously waited to prove my gaming superiority over every adult, teen and child within earshot.

Like every adult male in the room, electronics represented the great “unifier” among men. Whether you were a milquetoast CPA with a penchant for philosophy and culture — or a grizzled dock worker with a stubby cigar perched stubbornly in your teeth— electronic games

They are the post-9/11 generation, raised in an era of economic and national insecurity. They've never known a time when terrorism and school shootings weren't the norm. They grew up watching their parents weather a severe recession, and, perhaps most important, they hit puberty at a time when technology and social media were transforming society.

The sex difference in depression prevalence is dependent by age and to compare recent first-onset and persistent depression with respect to impairment, suicide attempts, conduct problems and academic functioning. Projecting from age-specific incidence proportions, the cumulative incidence of depression between the ages of 12 and 17 is 13.6% among male and 36.1% among female subjects. The sex difference in incidence is significant at the age of 12 years (5.2% in female versus 2.0% in male subjects, $P < 0.0001$), and it is significantly larger at ages of 13 through 17 years than at the age of 12 years (P -values < 0.05). Depression-related impairment was significantly greater in subjects with recent first-onset than persistent depression.

So what does Woebot tell 'Mike' to do for level 1 care in this scenario?

It'll be something like this:

Woebot: Hey Mike, what's up, buddy?

Mike: I'm freaking out about an exam tomorrow.

Woebot: I'm here for you. Let's take some time to think about this together OK?

Mike: OK.

Woebot: Do you have 10 minutes to work with me on this, Mike?

Mike: Yes.

Woebot: Great. Do you feel the panic in your body (heart racing, sweaty palms, etc.) or is mostly in your thoughts?

Mike: I'm panicking!

Woebot: I can help. Breathe with me like this.

[Woebot sends an image of Woebot taking deep breaths, which activates Mike's mirror neurons, and they can count together. Woebot also sends a link to Marconi Union's "Weightless" video, a proven visual/aural relaxation asset used

Advice for parents concerned about gaming

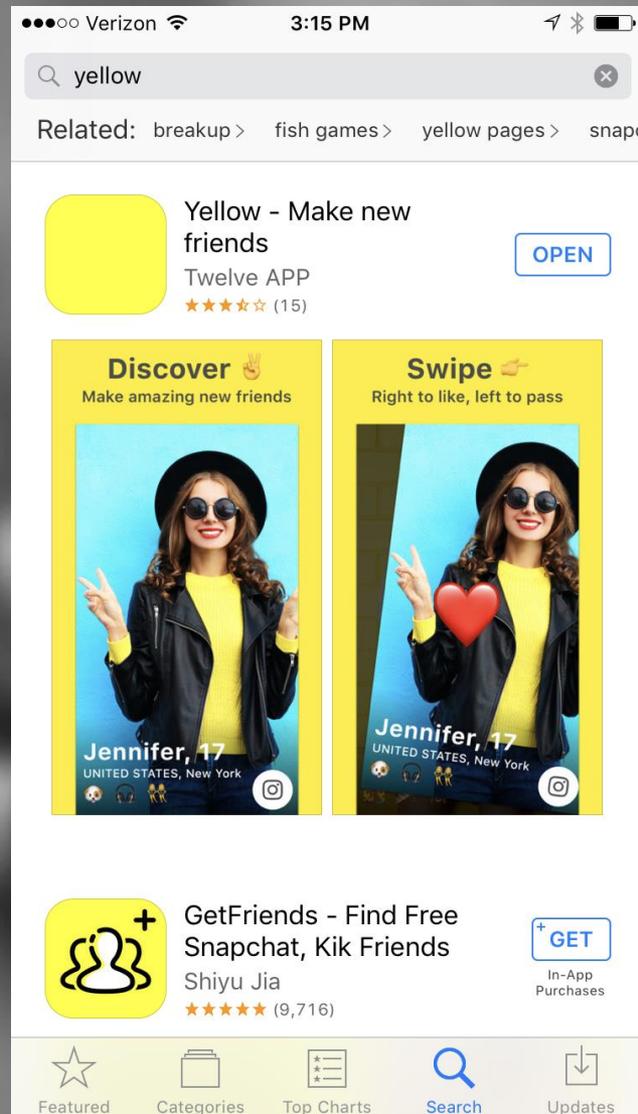

Ms McLean said parents should maintain an "open conversation" with their children about what games they were playing and downloading.

“Primary school children in particular should not be downloading games themselves. Full stop. It should all be done by the parent.

"The rule should be the child asks the parent, the parent checks [the game] out, downloads it, then locks th

In 1982 I was working as a writer and director of video-based education and marketing for NCR Corporation in Dayton, Ohio. The years spent observing the evolution of technology during the infancy of personal computing was incredibly rewarding - albeit stressful. I witnessed first-hand how the world of business and technology was changing in ways we could have never predicted.

About that same time — just a few hundred miles away in Pittsburgh Pennsylvania, Professor Scott Fahlman posted the following message on a Carnegie Mellon's online bulletin board

"I propose the following character sequence for joke markers: :-). Read it sideways."

Although the post was meant to help highlight future communications that were humorous - I'm sure he never thought that the first modern "emoticon" would take the world by storm. In essence, Professor Fahlman likely thought this was an efficient way to give a little of himself and his explicit image and 47% have sent one.

The dangers of sexting are numerous. According to the National Center on Sexual Exploitation (NCSE), sexting creates vulnerability to social problems at work and school. Most images sent are shared with others over text or are made available online. The Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) estimates that 88% of self-made sexually explicit images are "stolen" from their original upload location such as laptop webcams or phones. Even if photos are taken that do not include a face, they can still be traced through their phones metadata. Sexting greatly increases one's risk of sexual exploitation. Sending explicit images can create a negative dynamic allowing the requester to pressure, manipulate or coerce potential senders.
