>>> Recovery Residences to Improve Long-Term Outcomes Webinar – Nov. 8

Recovery residences are key in supporting individuals hoping to initiate and sustain long-term recovery, while decreasing costs associated with substance use disorder treatment. The National Council for Behavioral Health, in partnership with Relias Learning, will host a free Recovery Residences to Improve Long-Term Outcomes webinar from 2-3 p.m. (EST) on Nov. 8 to explore the importance of recovery residences in addressing addiction. The webinar will be presented by Jason Howell, executive director of RecoveryPeople and former board president of the National Alliance for Recovery Residences (NARR), along with David Sheridan, director of the Chandler Lodge Foundation and current board president of NARR. Participants will learn about recovery residences and the services they provide; challenges to quality residences and how to address them; a brief history of NARR (including its level of support and emerging models of statewide recovery systems) and how to incorporate the use of recovery residences into your continuum of care.
