Guidance for Providing Behavioral Health Services via Telehealth

March 2020

The State of Ohio and the Ohio Department of Mental Health and Addiction Services (OhioMHAS) have long been on the leading edge of ensuring the availability of high-quality health care services for the citizens of Ohio. Advances in technology have made it possible to utilize new tools that offer many opportunities. One of these tools is real-time, interactive videoconferencing, better known as telemedicine or telehealth. Both patients and providers throughout Ohio have quickly adapted to service delivery through secure videoconferencing. The technology has become very user friendly and mobile allowing much needed services to be provided to people within their own communities and homes.

Psychiatrists were among the first health care providers in the 1950s to utilize interactive videoconferencing to treat patients. With today’s computers, cell phones and various internet and web services, a vast array of behavioral health services can be offered to meet the needs of people where they live and work.

OhioMHAS recognizes the challenges for many people in obtaining behavioral health services and supports the use of telehealth as a tool to meet those treatment and support needs.

OhioMHAS-certified community behavioral health centers who are interested in utilizing interactive videoconferencing must provide quality, professional services in compliance with all federal, state, and local laws, including the respective Ohio professional licensing boards provisions for the various provider types you may have in your organizations. If you have questions about scope of practice, please consult directly with the respective licensing board(s).

OhioMHAS-certified community behavioral health centers who have accreditation with organizations such as CARF and JCAHO are encouraged to contact their accrediting organization regarding the addition of services provided via real-time, interactive videoconferencing. There may be additional accreditation standards required.

Many payers have realized the advantages of telemedicine/telehealth, but each payer may have differences in coverage and payment policies. For persons who may be enrolled in a private insurance plan or in an Ohio Medicaid Managed Care Plan you will need to check directly with that payer to determine their coverage policies, restrictions and claims guidelines.

The OhioMHAS Administrative Code for Interactive Videoconferencing is 5122-29-31. There are several safety and quality requirements in this rule. Please review and comply with this rule prior to performing services including, but not limited to: patient consent, confidentiality, documentation standards, emergency plans and policies. Services that may be provided using real-time, interactive videoconferencing as a certified community behavioral health center are:
